“ It was a summer day, hotter than most, and the sun was unrelenting. As I struggled with the heavy load of newspapers on my paper route, the headache and confusion I started to experience was unknown to me, but familiar to Mrs. Bonacci. When I came to her front door and struggled to speak, she knew I was in distress. Away went the great danes, and she told me to sit in the shade, providing me with more than 1 glass of water. She checked on me every few minutes until I felt better. A single act of kindness, more than 50 years ago remains in my memory of Mrs. Bonacci. May she rest in peace.
